Note from the Editors

Dear Readers

We take great pleasure in welcoming you to the re-launch issue of the Arab Economic and Business Journal (AEBJ). The journal started in 2009 with publications in business and economics from across the Arab region. In 2018, AEBJ's activities were interrupted as we migrated it to its new editorial home, Elsevier's Digital Commons. One of our key objectives for the coming years is to achieve Scopus indexation and to position ourselves as a high-quality research publisher from the Arab region. This entails maintaining a broad scope of research areas in the field of business and economics. We are grateful for the continuous support from our editorial board and our strong network of international reviewers who help us to continuously improve the quality of AEBJ.

AEBJ was created to provide a platform for the scientific interaction and dialogue of researchers in the Arab region and beyond. We will maintain the practice of publishing diverse research from across the world, including qualitative and quantitative studies, theoretical papers, as well as literature reviews. Furthermore, AEBJ will both provide a space for special issues to give voice to emerging research and niche topics that have great pertinence for economy and business. This is needed as a result of the immense challenges worldwide that many/all organizations, communities, and nations currently face (e.g., climate change, pandemic, food insecurities, etc.), which need to be reflected in scholarship that emphasizes the nexus between business and society, in order to remain relevant.

We are delighted to welcome you to our journal and hope that some of you will also join us as contributors in the future.
